When asked how he got started in fishing, Todd Corayer responded with typical wit, "Everything started with floured flounder cooked in butter for Saturday summer breakfasts, a first striper caught from Old Harbor's old docks at age 6, hand-lining tarred lines with clam bellies for the last throws of cod beneath Clay Head, hauling traps on the Mad Monk, long-lining cod, tuna and swordfish, reeling in fish great and small from surf, skiff and kayak, then finding a good pen to write about all the fishermen who pass through our lives. That's my story."
