Tuna Helper - Recipe for Success

Fishing for FALSE ALBACORE, the ultimate adrenaline rush!

featuring

Capt. Ray Stachelek

Castafly Charters

The false albacore season has experienced the best fishery in Rhode Island waters in recent memory this past fall. As other fish stocks dwindle, hard tail angling has actually improved over the years. September and October are exciting times after the dog days of summer and these "footballs" can test your ability, equipment, and certainly one's patience.

Have you ever had your reel drag cooked by a screaming albie? Nothing compares to this mind-boggling experience of man vs tuna on light tackle! See why so many fishermen call this 'the ultimate adrenaline rush.'

Captain Ray's seminar will help you learn how to greatly improve your odds. Through a combination of shared knowledge, photos, overhead drone footage and underwater action, compiled over many fishing seasons, will provide a wealth of information that very well could be the most comprehensive on the subject. No one is more obsessive and compulsive about "the details" than Capt. Ray.

Captain Ray Stachelek has guided clients in Rhode Island and Southern New England waters for the past twenty years. Ray specializes in light tackle angling and fly fishing. He grew up along the banks of Bullocks Cove, Riverside where he observed and interacted with the environment around him.

He has been a fly tyer for over 50 years and many of his saltwater fly patterns are listed in fishing catalogs and shops around the nation.

Cast A Fly Charters is endorsed by many of the major trade names in the fly fishing industry.
