Rod & Reel Maintenance, Winter Storage and Gear Review

Featuring

Dave Morton

Beavertail Rod & Reel
North Kingstown, RI

Fishing gear is expensive and though COVID there was a shortage so taking care of your gear is more important than ever before. And, if you are going to invest in new gear what should you look for?

Learn how to maintain your rods and reels, how to store them in the off-season and get a heads up on what to buy from rod and reel repair expert Dave Morton of Beavertail Rod & Reel. Why buy new gear when you can take care of gear and when necessary restore it to like new condition?

Dave Morton's reconditioning process often includes taking reels apart, cleaning all the parts, replacing or repairing what is broken and worn and then everything gets put back together. Morton has been repairing reels for over twenty years. He is a trained tool & die maker so he has the unique ability to offer customers advice and can provide machining services through his fully equipped machine shop.

Dave said, "Why purchase a new lower quality reel when you can take care of that old reliable reel and bring it back to new for less."

Beavertail Rod & Reel repairs all makes and models and can get parts for most of the oldest reels. "We can also modify and customize reels for anglers of all types, including people with disabilities, enabling them to fish or fish more effectively."

The company replaces guides and tips on rods too and can be found at www.beavertailrodandreel.com.

Attend this seminar and learn how to take care of your gear.
